One Wilshire deployment connects BICS to hundreds of networks; extends company's mobile and voice services

DENVER, Sept. 5, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- CoreSite, a provider of network-dense, cloud-enabled data center solutions and the CoreSite Mesh, today announced that BICS (Belgacom International Carrier Services) has selected CoreSite's One Wilshire data center campus in Los Angeles for the expansion of its global voice and mobile services footprint. BICS is a subsidiary of Belgacom, the largest telecommunications company in Belgium.

BICS' deployment will enable it to meet the demands of its current customers and leverage CoreSite's Los Angeles community of over 275 networks to expand its services to new partners across North America. CoreSite customers will benefit from direct access to BICS' voice and mobile offerings.

"This is an important step for us in our continuing expansion into the North America market. By extending our footprint to CoreSite's One Wilshire campus we are in a position to add reach and redundancy to our already robust network in the United States. Having an increasingly dense presence in our network will allow us to serve the growing demands of our fixed, mobile and internet customers in this region," said Brian Troesch, Vice President & Managing Director for the Americas at BICS.

"We are continuously improving our network. In the USA, BICS had an existing presence. This additional deployment on the West Coast is extremely strategic as it will open up opportunities for connecting carriers from Asia and providing stronger, improved service for our customers in the USA," said Johan Wouters, SVP Operations and Customer Services, BICS.

"CoreSite's One Wilshire campus is uniquely positioned to meet the growing demands of European multinationals looking to deploy their offerings in North America and beyond," said CoreSite COO, Jarrett Appleby, "It's a key trans-pacific gateway and world-renowned connectivity hub with an unmatched community of customers across the CoreSite Mesh. BICS' expansion enriches the diversity of this community and further solidifies CoreSite in Los Angeles as the interconnection partner of choice for international and domestic customers."
