

EdgeCast Networks Expands Global Content Delivery Network with CoreSite

December 11, 2013

Deploys services in CoreSite's Reston and Los Angeles facilities

DENVER, Dec. 11, 2013 /PRNewswire/ -- CoreSite, a provider of network-dense, cloud-enabled data center products and services, today announced that EdgeCast Networks is extending its content delivery network (CDN) with deployments in CoreSite's One Wilshire campus in Los Angeles and its Reston, VA facility. EdgeCast, one of the world's leading content delivery networks, is strengthening its global footprint by connecting to these diverse and significant interconnection hubs.

Today's announced expansion will enable CoreSite customers and carrier partners to take advantage of EdgeCast's high-performance CDN services including streaming, eCommerce acceleration, and application acceleration. CoreSite's customer communities in Los Angeles and Reston will also gain the ability to peer, manage traffic, and optimize service delivery by connecting directly to EdgeCast services.

"CoreSite hosts a diverse community of customers and carriers with the connectivity and capacity needed for large-scale deployments," said Mike Kleiman, chief operating officer of EdgeCast Networks. "Reaching this community in a cost-effective manner is vital to our success."

EdgeCast's presence in Los Angeles and Northern Virginia will further enrich CoreSite's growing ecosystem of over 750 enterprise, cloud, digital content, and network service providers.

"The continued demand for performance applications makes low cost and efficient content delivery a vital capability for our customers," said Jarrett Appleby, chief operating officer at CoreSite. "EdgeCast's presence in our data centers will connect them to a community of networks that enable them to deliver a reliable, high performance solution to the CoreSite ecosystem."
